STRATEGIC STUDIES & DEFENSE ANALYSIS™

Log in to a Distinguished Tradition.
Since 1819.
Proudly serving those who serve

Norwich University has proudly educated members of the military for nearly 200 years. We understand the dynamics of being both a student and a service member and provide a multifaceted support system to help students succeed.

Strategic Studies and Defense Analysis Online
EXCLUSIVELY DESIGNED FOR SPECIAL OPERATIONS FORCES

The Bachelor of Science in Strategic Studies and Defense Analysis (SSDA) program is specifically designed to build upon the military education and experience of U.S. Special Operations Forces (SOF). The program is structured to combine relevant coursework with your unique military experience in areas such as sociology-anthropology, geography, language, cultural awareness, regional politics, and international conflict.

The SSDA program is open exclusively to students who are Active Duty, Reserve and National Guard Soldiers, Sailors, Airmen, and Marines assigned to or retired from the USSOCOM and its subordinate commands and sub-unified commands. The SSDA degree may help you advance within the military or transition to another career.

Online Classroom

Norwich University has built a cutting-edge online learning environment that facilitates individual engagement, deep learning, networking, peer support, and one-on-one contact with faculty and student support staff. Our curriculum incorporates coursework specifically designed to help students succeed in the online learning environment. Classrooms are highly interactive, linked to extensive online learning resources, and accessible anywhere and anytime.

Convenience and Flexibility

Norwich provides 24/7 access and technical support to an online learning platform, enabling students to engage with program content and contribute to class discussions at any time from any location each week.

Career Placement

If you are planning for or transitioning to a civilian career or want to advance within the military, Norwich’s Strategic Studies and Defense Analysis online bachelor’s program gives you the knowledge, skills, and credentials to help you achieve your professional goals. Your bachelor’s degree can help prepare you for numerous positions and opportunities such as military analyst, defense contractor, intelligence officer, security contractor, operations management, key Department of Defense jobs, and others.

Norwich offers 24/7 access and support. For questions about the SSDA program, contact Sarah Harris at ssda@online.norwich.edu or call 1-866-684-7237.
A Degree Above

Because of our nearly 200-year affiliation with the U.S. military and long track record of developing leaders, a bachelor’s degree from Norwich University is highly regarded among the military community. Equally rigorous and rewarding, our bachelor’s degree completion program helps students distinguish themselves from their SOF peers and gain access to exciting career opportunities both within and beyond the military.

Norwich helps you build a foundation of knowledge and skills that can be used to advance both your military and civilian careers.

The Norwich Advantage

From the Field to the Classroom

The Bachelor of Science in Strategic Studies and Defense Analysis program focuses on strategies for improving the security, external relationships, and overall well-being of communities and countries. Students gain the theoretical knowledge and practical skills needed to develop these strategies through a comprehensive curriculum that builds on their military education and experience, enabling them to apply what they learn in class to initiatives and field exercises related to their current or past areas of deployment.

Students are taught by a highly knowledgeable faculty that includes the former assistant provost of the Naval Postgraduate School, retired military officers, and defense strategy experts from across the globe. Research, critical thinking, ethical decision-making, and leadership skills are fostered and woven throughout the curriculum, and are designed to give students the tools they need to help advance within the military or transition to a new career.

- Three start dates per year (January, May, September) allow you to begin the program when it’s convenient for you.
- You can transfer up to 84 semester credits and complete your bachelor’s degree in less than two years.
- You can access program content and contribute to class discussions on your own schedule and at your own pace through our flexible online platform.
- Faculty members bring extensive professional experience and knowledge into the virtual classroom, giving you uncommon insight into the ins and outs of defense strategy.
- Norwich understands the challenge of balancing a career with academic pursuits. Whether you need help finding the right research materials or balancing program requirements with work and family responsibilities, Norwich is here to assist and support you.
“I chose Norwich for its prestigious reputation and the opportunity it offered me to prepare for the future. The SSDA degree program was tailored to my Special Operations experience.”

- CSM Keith Fillip, SSDA 2012

As a Norwich SSDA student, you will:

✔ Experience a high degree of interaction with Norwich faculty and fellow classmates in small classes.

✔ Conduct research and analysis relating to regional threat environments and conflict areas.

✔ Incorporate individual research and military experiences into the classroom atmosphere to enhance theoretical and practical learning objectives.

✔ Apply principles of critical thinking, ethical decision-making and leadership that are interwoven throughout the curriculum.

In Your Corner.
A Motivating Force.

At Norwich, we understand the dynamics of being both a student and a service member. That’s why we provide an extensive support system of staff and faculty whose principal focus is to help you succeed academically, professionally, and personally.

Whether you need someone to walk you through the Tuition Assistance process, help you locate sources for a research paper, or tell you what to do if you have to step out, we are ready, willing and able to serve.

Capstone Project

As part of the final program requirements, SSDA students complete a series of in-depth, independent research projects on a country or region of their choice.

Based on their research, students develop recommendations for improving conditions in their selected area that take into consideration the historical, political, cultural, and economic influences at play.

In addition to its application in the field, the research findings contribute to the military’s body of knowledge of regions around the globe.
SSDA is an approved program with the Veteran’s Administration. As such, all GI Bill and other military payment options will be available to students applying for admission to the program.
